The course will cover all the necessary material to teach a Basic program of 8 hours and an Advanced program of up to 24 hours. This course is the most comprehensive in the security field. Anyone who has ever taken my Tactical Communications Course knows how passionate I was about teaching the material and how much time I took to research it. With my Doctorates in Psychology and Hypnotherapy, I have added the knowledge I gained as a Master Trainer of Neuro-Linguistic Programming to the challenges of Law Enforcement. I have worked in the security field for a long time and trained thousands of guards in this system of Tactical Communications.

This is your chance to be certified to teach this comprehensive program and add value to your entire defensive tactics program. Even if you don't work in Law Enforcement any more, the techniques can easily be adapted to any field for communications.

I will finally be revealing the secrets of how I impart the information so quickly and why people can't stop talking about how incredible this program is. If you ever wondered what makes it easy for some people to gain influence over others, this course will show it.

There will be limited space (16 people) to ensure that all the participants get the most experience from this program.

About the program:

This program based on Psychology, NLP (Neuro-Linguistic Programming) and Therapeutic methods of intervention develops Instructor knowledge, skills and the abilities for teaching Law Enforcement personnel Advanced Communication Tactics to de-escalate potentially violent situations. The course will address the most commonly occurring situations based around various working environments and provide the instructor with sufficient material to develop a program for use in their individual agency.

The primary goal of the program is to provide suitable advanced communication tactics training so that Instructors can effectively teach how to resolve conflicts. Upon completion of the training Instructors will be able to provide students with the knowledge to recognize the potential escalation in a confrontational situation and know how to make reasonable judgmental decisions for the selection of the most appropriate response option in any given situation.

In addition, methods of de-escalating the situation by the use of unconscious communications processes will be developed to assist in controlling the environment to the extent that the task at hand is completed to the satisfaction of all parties involved without the need of utilizing physical protection skills whenever possible.

In the event the situation should deteriorate into physical confrontations appropriate communications will be developed for use during such conflicts. All training will help to eliminate or reduce liability to both the employee and the employer in confrontational situations. You will be shown a variety of undesirable situations and you will be given a chance to practice different ways you can get out of them before and after instruction. All tactics will focus on the emphasis of removing yourself from the situation as safely and efficiently as possible with words as a force option.

About The Program Creator and Master Trainer

Dr. Kevin Vandeyck has over 25 years in Law Enforcement as a security guard, supervisor and trainer for several private security companies in the Greater Toronto Area, as well as conducting training for various police agencies around the world. Kevin has been teaching law enforcement and use of force since 1994 and specializes in Verbal Control.

Kevin is an internationally recognized Master-Trainer of Ericksonian Hypnotherapy and Neuro-Linguistic Programming, providing private trainings to groups of Medical Professionals and Medical Students.

“I became fascinated with the way words could change lives when as a child I saw Richard Bandler on TV doing some powerful transformational work with a person who had severe phobias. As I grew up I observed interactions with people and noticed the impact of words on people over a long term. Harsh cruel words and words of inspiration both deeply changed people. I noticed that some people could influence people so easily with words and others could only do it with threats of violence or harm. I began a lifetime study of human behaviour and the changes that words have on the psyche. My Doctoral thesis in Psychology was directly related to the conditioned responses to words and their neuro-chemical changes within the brain. These triggers were like a soft wiring that instantly created a change in state. As I worked in Law Enforcement I saw a great need to better communications and ways to de-escalate potentially violent encounters. It was for this reason I actively improved the course I designed for Intercon Security on Tactical Communications. I changed and adapted it based on thousands of role plays and feedback from critical incidents, testing what worked and didn’t work. I worked in the field putting to use the theories I had into practical application and documenting the results in lesson plans to teach to others. This is my passion and I want to share it will others.” – Kevin Vandeyck Ph.D
